Dear friend,

You might have been surprised at this silence of mine. But for the last fortnight I had absolutely no time, having had to perform the obsequies of a relation of mine.

Of course, I reminded Mr. T. K. D. in time and saw that he sent his life subscription. I believe you have received it.

In regard to the other matter also, I may assure you that I shall do my best to collect subscriptions. Nothing will give me greater pleasure than seeing the fitting celebration of the 81st birthday of the learned Maha-Mahopadhyaya. But even here, there is a general lack of enthusiasm among the public here, at present, though it is difficult to say what it is due to. Of course, financial depression and too many calls for donations, for some purpose or other – it is just now that we are going round with our hats for the Old Boys' Day which comes off shortly – are among the causes of the poor response. Still let me

About the 27th of last month when I was at Madras I called on you at about 3 PM. but I was told that you had just gone to attend a meeting at the Sanskrit College and hence I couldn't give myself the pleasure of meeting you. I started that very night for this place.

I trust this will find you all quite fit. With kind regards.

Yours sincerely
